

The Mendez Foundation's Too Good Programs are proven effective, interactive and fun. And so are our trainings!

Join us this March for the Too Good Programs Open Trainings.

Experience the Mendez Foundation Trainers as we share our expertise and practical classroom skills to ensure your successful implementation of the Too Good programs - Too Good for Drugs K-8, Too Good for Violence K-8, and Too Good for Drugs & Violence High School. As a training participant you will gain valuable hands-on experience with the curriculum while acquiring essential prevention education teaching strategies, and at the same time you will become familiar with the extensive research behind the model status Too Good programs. Additionally, the group workshop environment provides an ideal setting to network and share ideas and prevention strategies with other dedicated Prevention Specialists from across the country.

Too Good for Drugs K-8

Designed to both reduce risk factors and enhance protective factors, this curriculum helps students develop practical life skills emphasizing goal setting and decision making. The teacher friendly Too Good for Drugs curriculum is designed to be both fun and interactive, in addition to being an effective way to share the drug prevention message in your classroom.

Too Good for Violence K-8

Promote a safe classroom for your students through the implementation of the Too Good for Violence lessons and activities. This curriculum is based on the latest research in violence prevention including character education and bullying. In addition, it features measurable objectives, evaluation tools and parent components.

Too Good for Drugs & Violence High School

Too Good for Drugs & Violence High School offers you an innovative approach to further the knowledge, skills and attitudes your students need to remain safe and drug free. Implementing the Too Good for Drugs & Violence High School curriculum completes a comprehensive K-12 drug and violence prevention program.
